

Mom says that Dad has been “out of sorts” lately. He forgets where he puts things and quickly becomes furious with her. They don’t speak with each other afterward, and these situations seem to be happening more often...

What did the doctor mean by “Advanced Directives?”

My siblings and I don’t see eye to eye on Mom’s condition and needs anymore. I wish we had a neutral-minded person to provide some objective advice...

I received a call last night saying that Mom took a fall and was in the ER. I want to be with her now, but I’m halfway across the country. I feel helpless and at a loss. What can I do?

How do I convince Dad to stop driving before he injures himself or others?

Familiar Concerns? Care Management can help.

Managing a loved one’s healthcare can feel like entering uncharted waters. When complex situations move quickly and require immediate decisions, Geriatric Care Management can help you plan ahead for care needs or respond to emergency events.

You can turn to Waveny’s certified Care Managers any time you have a question or concern about an older adult. Call 203.594.5300 to learn more or schedule a free consultation.
